

A hand-drawn, black and white illustration of a computer monitor. The monitor has a thick bezel. At the top center of the bezel, the word "LOOP" is written in a simple, hand-drawn font. To the right of the bezel, there is a small circle representing a button or indicator. At the bottom right corner of the bezel, there are three small circles arranged horizontally, representing another set of buttons or indicators. The bottom of the monitor is depicted with several vertical lines, suggesting a stand or a series of vents. The entire monitor is set against a solid black background.
